LOCATION, LOCATION, LOCATION

Set in the Mediterranean to the east of the Spanish peninsula, the Balearic Islands have long been a popular holiday destination. Prized for their clear waters, sandy beaches, lively harbours and quaint fishing villages, the Balearics possess a special lifestyle and cuisine as varied and exciting as sailing among the islands themselves.

Each island is very different, with its own unique landscape and flavour. Mallorca is the largest with over 330 miles of coastline. Its varied landscape includes mountains and a coastline studded with tiny villages and beaches. Hillside terraces are planted with orange, clementine and lemon trees alongside olives and grapes. Mallorca also has a lively yachting industry and is home to many well-equipped harbours around its coast.

The joy of sailing around the islands is discovering their wealth of sandy coves and inlets, some only accessible from the sea, just waiting to be explored.

Our experienced skipper (a native of Mallorca) is very knowledgeable of the island and can take you to all the best locations, beaches and snorkelling spots. You can either tell the skipper where you would like to go and what you would like to achieve from the day or you can set back and let him take you to all the most beautiful areas.
